

A number of Katherine E. Young's previously-published translations of Inna Kabysh can be found by following these links:

http://www.stephen-spender.org/2011_brodsky_prize/2011_brodsky_third_ky.html

http://www.stephen-spender.org/2012_brodsky_prize/2012_brodsky_commended_KY.html

<http://bluelyrareview.com/inna-kabysh/>

<https://thelochravenreview.net/inna-kabysh-translated-by-katherine-e-young/>

<http://www.tupeloquarterly.com/with-you-i-forgot-by-inna-kabysh-translated-by-katherine-e-young/>

<http://www.tupeloquarterly.com/september-was-ending-by-inna-kabysh-translated-by-katherine-e-young/>

<https://exchanges.uiowa.edu/issues/undercurrents/new-article-4/>

Katherine E. Young's website, which includes links to most of her published translations of Inna Kabysh, as well as other Russian and Ukrainian writers can be found here: <https://katherine-young-poet.com/> There is a good deal of additional material about Inna Kabysh on the site, including information about Two Poems, a digital chapbook for the iPad that's available through iTunes:

<https://katherine-young-poet.com/inna-kabysh-project/> and <https://itunes.apple.com/us/book/two-poems/id907651300?mt=11>

Two very different Russian-language films have been made of Inna Kabysh's "Yuri Gagarin Was a Great Russian Poet". One is a video poem produced by Katherine McNamara at Artist's Proof Editions to accompany Katherine E. Young's translation (scroll down for the translation): <http://www.artistsproofeditions.com/portfolio-item/video-poem-yuri-gagarin-was-a-great-russian-poet/>. The other is available on the web from filmmaker Natasha Alfutova: <http://taaasty.com/~koot/3237888-yuriy-gagarin-by-velikiy-russkiy-poet>.