

Adele Ne Jame is first generation Lebanese American and has lived in Hawai'i since 1969. She serves as Professor Emeritus at Hawai'i Pacific University. She has published four books of poems, including The South Wind, and is completing her new manuscript, First Night at the Beirut Commodore. She has been awarded many poetry prizes including a National Endowment for the Arts in Poetry and a Cades Award for Literature. She served as the Poet-in-Residence at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. She has published poems in many fine journals such as Nimrod, Ploughshares, the Atlanta Review, the Denver Quarterly, the Iowa Review, and the Georgetown Review. October 2022 she, along with her artist daughter, Melissa Chimera, were Mikhail Series Lecturers at the University of Toledo: "The Lebanese Diaspora, Loss and Recovery, a Personal Retrospective," (Youtube video attached). Her work, as broadsides, have been exhibited at the Sharjah Biennial and at the Arab American National Museum. She offers writing consultations, readings and residencies